Princess and Junior Andre were among the guests celebrating the opening weekend of The Howl Scream Park in Leighton Buzzard, Bedfordshire, as the popular Halloween attraction returned for its milestone 10th anniversary season.

The siblings, children of Katie Price and Peter Andre, were photographed enjoying an evening at the award-winning event, posing alongside chainsaw-wielding performers and members of The Howl's roaming street theatre cast.

Located at Mead Open Farm, The Howl has officially opened its gates for 2026, marking a decade of terrifying visitors from across Bedfordshire, Buckinghamshire, Hertfordshire and beyond.

This year's event features seven live horror attractions, award-winning street theatre, live performances, DJs, themed bars and street food, transforming the farm into a Halloween destination after dark.

To celebrate its 10th anniversary, The Howl has introduced new experiences for 2026.

Two of its established attractions, Full Moon Manor and Squealers Yard, have received brand new scenes, offering returning visitors fresh scares alongside their favourite experiences.

Also joining the entertainment line-up is Ding Dong Die!, a brand new live gameshow hosted by Malcolm Crudd. Taking place every night at 10pm, the interactive show sees contestants face a series of unpredictable challenges, mystery doors and potentially deadly decisions.

The popular Circus of Screams also returns, hosted by internationally recognised drag artist Charity Kase, bringing another season of live entertainment to the event.

Elsewhere, visitors can experience a diverse line-up of horror attractions, including Howl Valley High, RED, Noxious Alley, The Shed and ShriekEasy, the latter transporting guests into a sinister 1920s underground speakeasy.

Beyond the attractions, The Howl's award-winning street theatre cast provides entertainment throughout the evening, interacting with visitors across the site and creating unexpected scares between attractions.

The opening weekend marks the beginning of a 13-night anniversary season, with The Howl continuing on selected dates throughout October.

With a decade of scares behind it, The Howl has established itself as a major seasonal attraction in Bedfordshire, combining immersive horror experiences with live entertainment and a festival-style atmosphere.
